PHILOSOPHY<sup>1</sup>

The manager's philosophy centers on two core beliefs about investing. First, all things (e.g., companies, industries, sectors and economies) cycle. Second, most people forget or inefficiently react to this first thing. The manager focuses on identifying companies that surprise the market by their participation in an earnings growth cycle. The team seeks to earn excess return as corresponding investor cynicism about this participation declines from elevated levels.

Initial investments are focused on companies that have recently entered or are extending an earnings cycle. They tend to have an improving foundation of earnings, cash flow, sales, etc., and are typically surrounded by some level of cynicism or investor neglect.

The selection process is built on the idea that good investing discipline starts with an explicit identification of what one is looking for combined with the willingness and ability to look broadly for it. The manager believes quantitative tools are particularly good at addressing both these requirements. They force the investor to clearly identify the type of investment opportunity he or she seeks while allowing the investor to objectively look across a broad universe for those opportunities.

Starting the process with quantitative tools provides confidence that opportunities fit within the team's philosophy but the manager believes that the subjective nature of investing requires the steady hand of an experienced professional. The manager's long-tenured investment professionals use their judgment and expertise to confirm potential investment ideas uncovered by the process. The final decision is theirs to make.

GOALS

Take advantage of the breadth provided by quantitative tools and the depth of qualitative analysis to identify both the rewards and the risks associated with potential investments

Maximize portfolio diversification through explicit early identification of the risks associated with each potential investment idea

Earn excess return by buying companies that "surprise" the market as they overcome negative or cynical sentiment

Risks Associated with Large Cap Core Investing

Large Cap Core investing is based on the expectation of positive price performance due to continued earnings growth or anticipated changes in the market or within the company itself. However, if a company fails to meet that expectation or anticipated changes do not occur, its stock price may decline. Moreover, as with all equity investing, there is the risk that an unexpected change in the market or within the company itself may have an adverse effect on its stock. As with all equity investing, there is the risk that a company will not achieve its expected earnings results, or that an unexpected change in the market or within the company will occur, both of which may adversely affect investment results. The biggest risk of equity investing is that returns can fluctuate and investors can lose money. Securities issued by large-cap companies tend to be less volatile than securities issued by smaller companies. However, larger companies may not be able to attain the high growth rates of successful smaller companies, especially during strong economic periods, and may be unable to respond as quickly to competitive challenges.

Performance is shown after deduction of transaction costs and both “gross” (before the deduction of management fees) and “net” (after the deduction of management fees). The net returns reflect the application of the highest wrap fee of 3% annum. Performance figures include all internal, retail Large Cap Core accounts of Eagle Asset Management, a St. Petersburg, Florida-based firm. Past performance is not a guarantee of future results, and no inference should be drawn that managed accounts will achieve similar performance in the future. Eagle Asset Management, Inc. claims compliance with the Global Investment Performance Standards (GIPS®). GIPS® is a registered trademark of CFA Institute. Eagle Asset Management, Inc. has received a firm-wide verification for the periods January 1, 1982 through December 31, 2024. Performance data for 2025 and the current year may be revised, and Eagle will publish any revised performance data. Because accounts are individually managed, returns for separate accounts may be higher or lower than the average performance stated. Performance includes reinvestment of all income and gains, and is depicted on a time-weighted and size-weighted average. Investing in securities may result in a loss of capital. ### Descriptions and Definitions

The Standard & Poor’s 500® Index is based on the average performance of 500 widely held common stocks. The S&P 500® is a broad-based measurement of changes in stock market conditions. It consists of 400 industrial, 40 utility, 20 transportation and 40 financial companies listed on U.S. market exchanges (mostly NYSE issues). It is a capitalization-weighted index, calculated on a total return basis with dividends reinvested. The S&P 500® represents about 75 percent of the NYSE market capitalization. Indices are unmanaged, and one cannot invest directly in an index.

Standard Deviation – Standard Deviation is a measure of the dispersal or uncertainty in a random variable. For example, if a financial variable is highly volatile, it has a high Standard Deviation. Standard Deviation is frequently used as a measure of the volatility of a random financial variable.
